

BROWN BAG LUNCHEON
July 17, 11:30–12:30
Building 5200, Tennessee Conference Room C

Speaker: Dr. Daryl D. Green
Presents: "Creating Opportunities through Economic Chaos: Career Strategies for the Future"

The local chapters of Women in Nuclear (WIN) and Federally Employed Women (FEW) and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL) Committee for Women (CFW), would like to invite interested staff members to attend a Brown Bag Luncheon, July 17, from 11:30–12:30, in Building 5200, Tennessee Conference Room C at the ORNL.

A past regional and national FEW trainer and leadership development expert, Dr. Daryl D. Green, lectures and writes on contemporary issues impacting individuals, businesses and societies across the nation. With over 20 years of management experience, he is noted and quoted by USA Today, Ebony magazine, Associated Press, WBIR's Live at Five, Answerline, American Urban Radio, and BET's Buy the Book. His FamilyVision column, syndicated through Newspaper Publishers Association, has reached over 200 newspapers and more than 15 million readers across the country. Green is the author of several books, including "Breaking Organizational Ties," "My Cup Runneth Over" and the acclaimed "Awakening the Talents Within." He has published over 100 articles on the subjects of decision-making and leadership that have been syndicated to thousands of websites.

As a social advocate, Green co-founded the Greater East Pasco Achievement Program, a nonprofit tutorial service, which assisted over a hundred students in Washington State. He received the DOE Community Service Award and the Pasco Martin Luther King, Jr. Humanitarian Award for this effort. Green also served as the former president of the Oak Ridge Chapter of Blacks in Government (BIG) in Tennessee and is a BIG lifetime member.

One Tennessee paper called him a "20th Century Renaissance Man," because he is a manager, entrepreneur, artist, marketer, poet, producer, personal coach, professor, and author. As an inspiring professor and renowned lecturer, Green has taught global management, international business, marketing, strategic planning and entrepreneurship at Lincoln Memorial University and Knoxville College. In 2009, the Lane College Black Executive Exchange Program presented him with an Outstanding Leadership Award.

Green has served as a keynote speaker, panelist and presenter at the University of Tennessee, Kentucky State University, FEW Training Conference, BIG National Training Conference and the Society for Advancement of Management Conference, among others. He holds a doctorate in Strategic Leadership from Regent University, an M.A. in organizational management from Tusculum College and a B.S. in engineering from Southern University. Green is also a member of the Academy of Strategic Management. Visit his website at www.darylgreen.org.
